Are you nervous about the red light cameras that are NOW Live?

Yes No

They are a good idea.

If the yellow increased from 4 seconds to 6 seconds, the violations would be rare. Most of the tickets now are inadvertent split second mistakes with no intent to break the law and are not a safety issue because there is already an all red interval. The all red interval exists to allow for normal human error. The cameras use this common lapse to create another tax.

In a bad economy it is horrible that a city government would put an additional financial load on its already hurting residents. Not to mention the privacy issues. Shame on you for trying to nickel and dime your residents' nickel. Are we only allowed privacy in our homes? Are we not allowed to have privacy in our own vehicles as well?

I stop for red lights. I think cameras are a good idea.

I have seen, sitting 3 or 4 cars back, the cameras going off when the lights are turning green and cars start to move?? There is NO way you can convince me, that this is not just a money maker for all the cities. I hope when you start to see where this system is costing you more money then you are taking in, that the difference will come out of the commissioners' salaries. But it's just like all governments; it's going to be the Tax payer left with the Bill again!!!!

good idea

IF YOU DON'T RUN RED LIGHTS YOU WON'T HAVE A PROBLEM, SIMPLE AS THAT

Big brother at its best. If the city really wanted to make intersections safer, you can do it by adding 2 seconds to the yellow light (studies show)

People should have some privacy. It seems that everything is photographed.
